Havelock North area affected by gastro illness

- - - - -

Havelock North residents are being urged to boil water as a vomiting and diarrhoea outbreak affects a number of people in the area.

Hawke’s Bay District Health Board’s Medical Officer of Health Nick Jones said while the source of the outbreak hadn’t been confirmed there was a possibility that the cause of the illness was from the water.

“We want to prevent any further illness, which is why we are taking such significant precautionary measures and encouraging everyone in the Havelock North area to boil water over the weekend or until the cause of the outbreak was determined.

“Boiling the water was the only certain way to kill all the bugs that might be causing the illness,” Dr Jones said.

Hastings District Council had also chlorinated the water this afternoon as another precautionary measure. However until the type of infection had been determined it was recommended to take the extra step and boil water, for a minute, before drinking it.

The institute of Environmental Science and Research (ESR) would be working over the weekend to identify where the contamination had come from and what the illness was caused by. Potentially the significant rain event from last weekend may have contaminated the supply and further testing was underway.

Dr Jones said as the illness was widespread in the Havelock North area it was unlikely to have come from a food source and water borne illness was more likely, however testing would determine the exact cause.

Symptoms of the illness being reported were diarrhoea and influenza like symptoms; headaches, muscle pain, fever and feeling generally unwell. Symptoms could last up to 10 days but would usually get better without antibiotics.

Children and older people were most at risk of dehydration and fluids while the diarrhoea lasted was very important. More information is available from

Water confirmed as source of gastro illness in Havelock North
Water testing has confirmed the source of the gastro outbreak in Havelock North was water borne, but the type of bug is not yet known.
Hastings District Council chlorinated the water Friday (12th August) afternoon. Chlorination is effective at killing most bugs, however Havelock North residents should boil water for one minute before drinking it until the type of bug is confirmed.
Hawke’s Bay District Health Board’s Medical Officer of Health Nick Jones said while the type of bug was not yet known information on prevention and treatment remained the same.
“As a significant precautionary measure we encourage everyone in the Havelock North area to boil water over the weekend or until the cause of the outbreak is determined. Results are expected early in the week, Dr Jones said.”

 Hastings District Council Hi all; we understand that people are very concerned about the water situation in Havelock North and want to advise that all channels possible have been used to advise people that they need to boil town supply water for at least a minute before drinking. All media (print and radio) were asked to spread the message as soon as Council was contacted by health authorities late yesterday. Individual advisories have been issued to places like rest homes by the Hawke's Bay District Health Board. It will be of great help if you let your circle of friends know, in case they have missed the information. We will be working on how this happened and when we have information we will get it out to you, but unfortunately it is often takes a number of tests to get a reliable answer and our first priority has to be securing the water supply and making it safe as soon as possible. Please bear with us. If you have concerns about the health of anyone in your family or friends, please contact you doctor as soon as possible. (Post) August 13, 2016 2:58 pm	16.7k	98	-	17%	3.6k

	Hastings District Council Understandably there are a lot of questions around the stomach illness outbreak in Havelock North and we are working to keep you as up-to-date as we can - however acknowledging that we don't yet have all the answers. With the numbers of questions coming through Facebook we are unable to address them all personally, and so we're hoping the below facts will go some way to letting you know where this is up to, and give you some of the background. Please spread them through your networks. Firstly it is important to note that at this stage we do not know what the bug is which is causing this gastro outbreak however by chlorinating and asking everyone to boil water we are taking all practicable steps to ensure the water supply is safe. Background. Testing of HDC water occurs regularly as per NZ drinking water standards – on average every 2 days. This week the water supply in Havelock North was tested on Tuesday and the results were clear. This was post the recent weekend of significant rain. On Thursday, the next regular tests were done and the results from this testing were received on Friday morning. These results indicated one potential positive, which highlighted a concern and one negative for the presence of the ecoli indicator. [Ecoli is an indicator of a waterborne disease but is in itself not dangerous to health.] At that time, the health board reported increasing numbers of Havelock North people suffering stomach illness and despite the water tests not being conclusive the health board and Council made the decision to chlorinate the Havelock North water supply and issue a boil water notice was taken. This morning's test results confirm the presence of indicator ecoli, but the health board testing of stools and results from the Council's further tests won't be back (Post) August 13, 2016 4:00 pm	15.8k	122	-	21%	4.7k

 Hastings District Council Hi all - there is a lot of comment around the fact that people outside of the Havelock North water supply area are also sick. We have had discussions with the health board on this and they assure us that they are unrelated. The water supplies in areas outside Havelock North are clear - and the illnesses are the result of other bugs that are circulating in the community. The health board says these are at 'normal' winter levels. (Post) August 13, 2016 5:40 pm	8.8k	66	-	17%	1.9k

Hastings District Council

Good morning. Below is a statement from the Hastings District Council that was published in Hawke's Bay today this morning (Monday) about the debilitating illness that is affecting residents in Havelock North.
We have posted it here for those of you who haven't seen it in HB Today.

Havelock North Water Contamination
The illness and disruption that has been inflicted on many Havelock North residents by the contamination of the Havelock North water supply has been very serious. The Council is charged with supplying you safe, reliable water. The Council has failed to do this on this occasion. As Mayor and Chief Executive, we offer our sincere apology for this. Councillors and staff are devastated that hundreds of families in our community have been struck by this debilitating illness. While the cause remains unknown, there is clear evidence that the Havelock drinking water bores have been contaminated resulting in widespread sickness. Council is working as quickly as possible to identify the source of the contamination, however at this stage in our investigations there is no evidence of human or technical failure.
Based on health advice and water industry standards, we know that the combination of the recent chlorination together with boiling drinking water makes the water safe to drink.
We feel it is important to provide you with a summary of the issues:
The Contaminant Making People Sick
We have been advised that Campylobacter is most likely the bug that is causing the illness. The Hawke's Bay District Health Board have issued information on this bug and how to deal with the related illness. This information can be found at <http://www.ourhealthhb.nz/assets/News-and-Event-files/HE1211-Campylobacter-WEB.pdf>
Water Testing
Hastings District Council tests all water supplies in the Hastings District in accordance with the New Zealand Drinking Water Standards. This involves testing both the bores and the reticulation pipework routinely. For supplies that are considered secure (e.g. drawing from

 Hastings District Council Hastings supply being chlorinated An e-coli indicator has been found in one of the nine water tankers used to supply drinking water to Havelock North residents. The suspect tanker was parked in the Havelock North High School car park. Residents who took water from this site and still have it in containers are asked to dump it. The water from the other tankers has been tested and is clear, however the water in all the tankers is now being chlorinated. It is believed that the cause is likely to be the tanker, however as a “super precautionary approach” the water supplies for Hastings and Flaxmere are now being chlorinated. The daily tests for those supplies have been clear. While no boil water notice has been issued, as a precautionary approach, mayor Lawrence Yule says people may want to boil any drinking water or use bottled water while the chlorine works its way through the system. (Post) August 18, 2016 10:26 am	84.9k	1.2k	-	19%	24.2k

FAQs

How water testing works

Who sets water testing rules?

The rules on the testing of drinking water are set out in the NZ Drinking Water Standards, which are overseen by the Ministry of Health, and its Drinking Water Association.

Does Hastings District Council comply with those rules?

Yes; the timing and results are all fed into a database system created by the Ministry of Health (Water Information NZ) which ensures the timing of tests and selection of sites remain within the drinking water rules.

Does Council do the testing?

No, the collection of samples and testing are done by an independent and accredited laboratory. Samples are collected from approved test points, both at the bores and within the pipe system across the district.

Why does it take so long to get results back?

The length of time depends on what you are testing for. Very simplistically, the lab has to 'grow' whatever bugs might be in the system, to a stage at which they can be identified. The organisms will only grow at their own speed; there is no way to 'hurry them up'.

What is the difference between e-coli and campylobacter?

E-coli is commonly found in people and the environment and is found in 'poo'. The test for it is relatively fast (24 hours) and it is a good 'flag' for showing if there are other more serious bugs in the water, such as campylobacter.

Campylobacter is a bacteria that can cause a nasty illness. It can be spread in a number of ways, among them through food and water, as well as person to person. In this case, campylobacter has been discovered in the Havelock North water supply

 Hastings District Council Hastings water tests clear: Test results from the Hastings, Flaxmere and Bridge Pa water supplies have come back clear this afternoon. The tests were taken from across the network including from the same areas of the water supply that returned suspect results yesterday. Hastings District Council chief executive Ross McLeod said receiving the clear results was “expected, but also a huge relief”. It is believed yesterday’s suspect results were an anomaly due to sampling irregularities in a small number of samples. Today’s results are consistent with results for the 327 tests taken over the 12 months ending mid July, which have all been clear. “What today’s results mean is that the Hastings supply, which also provides water to Flaxmere and Bridge Pa, can continue to be considered safe to drink.” He said Council will continue to chlorinate the supply in the short term as required by the drinking water standards. In Havelock North, the water continues to be chlorinated and a boil water notice remains in place until the health authorities are confident the issue is limited to campylobacter, which is killed by chlorine. (Post) August 21, 2016 4:51 pm	15.3k	187	-	15%	2.8k

Hastings District Council

Understandably there are a lot of questions around the stomach illness outbreak in Havelock North and we are working to keep you as up-to-date as we can - however acknowledging that we don't yet have all the answers. With the numbers of questions coming through Facebook we are unable to address them all personally, and so we're hoping the below facts will go some way to letting you know where this is up to, and give you some of the background. Please spread them through your networks. Firstly it is important to note that at this stage we do not know what the bug is which is causing this gastro outbreak however by chlorinating and asking everyone to boil water we are taking all practicable steps to ensure the water supply is safe. Background. Testing of HDC water occurs regularly as per NZ drinking water standards – on average every 2 days. This week the water supply in Havelock North was tested on Tuesday and the results were clear. This was post the recent weekend of significant rain. On Thursday, the next regular tests were done and the results from this testing were received on Friday morning. These results indicated one potential positive, which highlighted a concern and one negative for the presence of the ecoli indicator. [Ecoli is an indicator of a waterborne disease but is in itself not dangerous to health.] At that time, the health board reported increasing numbers of Havelock North people suffering stomach illness and despite the water tests not being conclusive the health board and Council made the decision to chlorinate the Havelock North water supply and issue a boil water notice was taken. This morning's test results confirm the presence of indicator ecoli, but the health board testing of stools and results from the Council's further tests won't be back until Tuesday next week at the earliest. Until further information is available the chlorination of the water will continue, as will the boil water instruction. The use of chlorination and boiling the water means the water is safe to drink, and to use for things like brushing your teeth. You can use the shower as per normal. The Havelock North water supply is physically isolated from the Hastings water supply and the connection valves remain closed. A joint communication effort between HDC and the DHB was activated as of last evening to ensure the messages regarding health safety and precautions.
